Potts replaces Tongue for West Indies ODIs

Matthew Potts has been called into the England Men's squad for the upcoming ODI series against West Indies in the Caribbean as a replacement for Josh Tongue.

Tongue has been ruled out of the white-ball tour after he suffered an injury during the current England Lions camp in the United Arab Emirates.

Durham paceman Potts played the most recent of his three ODIs against Ireland at Bristol in September.

The three-match ODI series against West Indies begins in Antigua on Sunday 3 December.
